WORLD'S FAIR PROJECT.

Bishop Potter on the Fall of Philadelphia.
The following letter from Bishop Potter to Dr. Holland is a high endorsement of Miss Perry's project of a hall of philanthropy for the World's Fair, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. As the head of the vast and richly endowed charities which his church conducts in the metropolis of the nation, Bishop Potter speaks with rare and intimate knowledge of the worth of organized beneficence, and the educative influence of a proper exhibit of its achievements and methods. There is scarcely a mode of help for suffering man that is not immediately under his episcopal eye and hand. Not content with second-hand acquaintance or cursory observation, he went two summers ago into a settlement house, and lived there to watch and direct its workings. It was he who last year rallied the conscience of New York to the crimes of its own police, and proved himself the mightiest champion its poor have yet found against municipal outrages. Miss Perry could not desire a better second to her motion, nor the woman of the Wednesday Club a better ally. Let the hall of philanthropy be built. Following is Bishop Potter's letter: "Dear Mr. May 18, 1901.—My Dear Dr. Holland: The suggestion of your admirable sermon that there should be a hall of philanthropy in connection with your World's Fair is of exceptional value and timeliness. In no progress has been more inspiring than in this connection, and the educative value of a hall in which could be assembled all that illustrates the best instrumentalities, agencies and mechanisms for the humane service of humanity would make such a hall a university of beneficence. May this happy suggestion be crowned with success. Yours ever,
Henry C. Potter.

A Stunning Wrap.
One of the most stunning things in wraps that have been seen is of white cloth, heavy and long. It encircles the figure and has one end, which is thrown over the shoulder. Being heavy, the wrap hangs beautifully, but the most attractive part of the garment, or the noticeable feature, which makes it attractive, is a sort of Indian decoration on the inside. There is a band of pale blue on the edge encircling the wrap and also of cloth, combined with this is a line of bright yellow and one of black. In the corners of the wrap the cloth in the colors is carried into sharp points or rays.

The Original of Barrie's Girls.
If the American visitor to London this season will watch carefully when he or she is at first nights at the theater or at picture shows, it is possible that he may see a charming lady with a "crooked smile," which he will recognize if he has read his Tommy and Grizel carefully. She, herself, the daughter of a novelist, is said to have suggested to Mr. Barrie many of Grizel's characteristics, although of course her life has been in no sense whatever like that of the book's heroine. She is not even Scotch.—Saturday Post.

Old Names of Towns.
The following towns in Pennsylvania are enumerated in the twelfth century: Jersey Shore, Loyalsock, Cippinose, Picture Rocks, Wolf, Cherrytree, Cornplanter, Scrub Grass, Victory, Twilight, Patnaus, Freedom, Paradise, Red Lion, Moon, Slippery Rock, Daisy Town, Soap Level, Snow Shoe, Popcorn, Licking, Paint, Chest, Fox, Bald Eagle, Oil Creek, Woodcock, Rush, Andy, Fair Chance, Warrior's Mark, Wampum, Jeddo, Shickelany, Warrior Run, Eden, Four Corners, Lively Town, Mushroom and Peach.

Cats Aboard Liners.
Every large ocean liner carrying passengers, always has, on board from six to ten cats, these being apportioned to various parts of the ship, as well as appearing on the vessels' bows. A few of the first-class saloons cats have become quite celebrated, especially in the long-voyage boats that go to India and Australia. Large sums have been offered for one sealion cat on a great line, and the staff have to guard it strictly from acquisitive admirers, in whose luggage it has several times been found.

Our New Book: "Phases."
The national capital is delighted with a new thing phrase. When anything from the line of a golf link it is, in the terms of the new slang, "all sheeky." Everybody uses it. Today the dignified secretary of war, who has some boys of his own, didn't catch himself before he said something or other was "all sheeky."

Gets Chair of English Literature.
Professor F. M. Padelford, now of the University of Idaho, will occupy the chair of English literature in the University of Washington next fall.

A MERRY BUSY BABY.

Trick of a Mother That Looked Like Impertinence.
There is an infant in Washington who when he gets old enough to read about Sisyphus, will know how to sympathize with that mythical Greek. Baby was not in evidence on a certain afternoon when a contributor called on his mamma and, as the newspaper woman writes, she asked if he were asleep. "Oh, no," answered the mother, "he's wide awake, but he's busy they are busy." Of course I made inquiry as to what a baby of ten months could possibly be busy about, and the mother opened the door of the bedroom that I might see for myself. There, on the rug, spread where the sun would catch it, sat the little lordship, as sober as a judge, doing—why, you'd never guess what that blessed child was doing. His hands had been smeared with some sticky substance (let us hope it was innocent), and to one of them stuck a dozen tiny feathers. Baby gravely picked the feathers off his left hand with his right, and then as solemnly set to work to pick them off his right hand with his left. "My mother always kept her babies quiet that way," said the young matron, "and I find it works beautifully with Algeron. I always fix his hands so when I expect company, and he'll sit for hours trying to get the feathers off." I offer this plan for the benefit of perplexed mothers, but at the same time I think it's a mighty mean advantage to take of the patience of an innocent child.—Washington Post.

Millionaire Teaches Bible Class.
Lord Overton, the millionaire peer of Glasgow, has conducted a Bible class of about 500 young men in Glasgow for more than 30 years and as a preacher and evangelist he is much in demand. He is specially interested in everything that has to do with the well-being of young men, and among other things he pays a well known Scotch minister $5,000 a year to devote himself to the work of an evangelist. But he is no "namby-pamby." He is a keen fisherman, is more than a fair shot and is not to be despised at golf.

Perfect Becomes Blind.
Cardinal Ledochowski, the prefect of the Propaganda Fide, had become completely blind. The pope at first refused to believe the diagnosis made by the physicians and sent his own oculist, Professor Martini, to see the cardinal. After a prolonged examination Dr. Martini declared that the operation which had been suggested would be useless, as the cardinal's optic nerves were permanently paralyzed.

"Glove" Made of Oil Cans.
In many parts of Spain the "glove" in general use is made from an empty petroleum oil can, by cutting a hole near the bottom on one of the sides to make a draft, the can being lined with gypsum to the pleasure of the constructor, giving the fire space accordingly. The glove thus made, primitive as it is in its appearance, is effective in purpose and costs the equivalent of but a few cents of our money.

How to Be Happy.
Give a man this taste (for good books), and the means for gratifying it, and you can hardly fail of making a happy man. You place him in contact with the best society in every part of history—with the wisest, the witliest, the tenderest, the bravest and the purest characters who have adorned humanity. You make him a denizen of all nations, a contemporary of all ages.—Sir J. Herschel.

Mexico Supplies Us with Brakes.
For the brakes in the paint and whitewash brushes America is indebted to the patient labor of women and children in their homes in Mexico. The material of which these brushes are largely made is the hair of the Tannoo deer from the plant of that name. America imports more than 3,000 tons of this hair a year, a third of the entire output of Mexico, and no pay to our southern neighbor $200,000 for it.

Had Used the Dresden.
A woman prominent in smart society recently purchased a beautiful set of Dresden china coffee cups, but the next day sent them back to the store as not quite satisfactory. A clerk, returning the fragile things to the cases, touched something sticky. Investigation proved that the cups had been used and washed carelessly.

Best Coal for Heating.
When a coal fire is burning for heating and the electric light is for lighting, an exhausted room has a far better chance of being heated by the heat of the other than by the heat of the light.

Dinner Dishes and Death Follow.
The death of the late Dr. W. H. Hill, Early River, is attributed to the fact that he ate a dinner of the same food every day for a long time.

WILL NOT RUN AGAIN.

MCKINLEY WOULD DECLINE A THIRD NOMINATION.

President Writes a Formal Statement Saying He Would Not Accept Another Nomination if It Were Tendered Him—Other Booms May Now Inflame.

Washington special:

President McKinley says he is not a candidate for a third term and that he would not accept a nomination if it were tendered him. A formal signed statement to this effect was issued at the close of the cabinet meeting Tuesday afternoon. The statement was written by the President himself. He prepared it Monday, discussed its contents at an informal meeting of the cabinet and after amending a few clauses at the regular cabinet meeting Tuesday morning decided to make it public. In this decision he was seconded by every member of his cabinet as well as by others of his political and personal friends with whom he discussed the advisability of taking an unequivocal position in regard to the third term talk which has been running in the newspapers of the country for several weeks. It is only fair to the President to say that the language of his statement leaves little doubt about his sincerity. It would have been difficult for him to have written a letter which would have presented his views in plain terms. He says, among other things: "I will say now, once for all, expressing a long-settled conviction, that I not only am not and will not be a candidate for a third term, but would not accept the nomination for it if it were tendered me."

President McKinley's letter comes as a startling surprise to office holders and politicians and everybody who is directly or remotely interested in his future plans. Until he submitted a draft of the letter to his cabinet Monday night possibly only three persons in Washington knew that he contemplated taking the public into his confidence regarding his desire at the end of his present term. One of this trio was his secretary, Mr. Cortelyou. Another was Secretary Long, to whom he communicated a statement of the contents of the letter during a private conference. The third is Comptroller Davies, who learned about the President's contemplated move during an hour's walk through the paths of the White House lot. The other members of the cabinet were to state their emotions without exaggeration, simply dumfounded when the President informed them what he was about to do.

Nobody in Washington pretends to be able to fathom the President's motive for making the announcement at this date, a remarkable time for the making of anything of the kind in history. There is a total of 4,064 banks, at the close of business April 20, 1900, there were 3,031. Total resources are $5,380,791,307; in 1900, $4,811,950,048. Total individual deposits $2,803,065,449; in 1900 they were $2,440,212,050. Loans and discounts are $2,011,620,270; in 1900, $2,500,034,000. Surplus funds and undivided profits amount to $110,017,134; in 1900 they were $388,767,200. Lawful money in reserve, including the 5 percentum redemption fund with the treasurer, is $505,000,294; last year it was $510,100,880. The average reserve held is 29.1 per cent.

There is not only the unwritten law against third terms for Presidents, but there is on file the expression of the House of Representatives against it. This was adopted by the House in the Forty-fourth Congress, just before McKinley was elected a member of that body.

In the beginning of the Forty-fourth Congress, on Dec. 15, 1876, Congressman William M. Springer of Illinois introduced the following resolution, which was adopted by a vote of 233 yeas to 18 nays, 38 not voting.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States, in retiring from the Presidential office after their second term, has become, by universal concurrence, a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwelcome, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions.

CHICAGO WOMAN SAYS THAT ALL MEN ARE LIARS.

The woman most talked about in Chicago just now is Mrs. Nancy B. Irving, who offers $1,000 in cash to the first business or professional man who can conclusively prove that he has carried on his work for one month without telling a lie. The conditions are simple. Mrs. Irving will name two men, the man who thinks he holds title to $1,000 may name two, and a fifth will be named by these four. They will act as judges upon the business record of the claimant, trusting him to tell his own story and give all the evidence. Mrs. Irving thinks she will not lose the $1,000. If she does she is quite certain the honesty of the man who gets it will have reduced him to such poverty that he will need it.

With a view to controlling the immigration which has been coming to this country in violation of law Commissioner General Powderly is in favor of designating exclusive ports of entry along the Canadian and Mexican borders for the admission of aliens from over the border. The experience of the Immigration Bureau has proven beyond question the ineffectiveness of the present system, and the plan suggested by Mr. Powderly is believed to be the only way out of the dilemma.

Of the pensions granted 35,308 were for Mexican, Indian, civil and war of 1812, and 3,523 for service in the war with Spain. In addition 4,100 names which had been dropped or suspended for various causes were restored to the rolls. ACCEPTED BY CUBA.

PLATT AMENDMENT ADDED TO ISLAND CONSTITUTION.

By a Vote of 10 to 11 the Constitutional Convention Decides in Favor of Adopting the Provisions of the Measure Entire.

After a short session in Havana Wednesday, the Cuban constitutional convention voted that the Platt amendment, just as it stands, be added to the constitution. The resolution had a preamble referring to the joint resolution of Congress, the treaty of Paris, and the Platt amendment. The vote was 10 to 11. The Radicals made no opposition. Many Spaniards, Cubans and Americans hoped that the amendment would be rejected, and thus, perhaps, annexation would come about. It is stated that the Radicals were more relieved after the amendment had been accepted than were the Conservatives.

According to the provisions of the Platt amendment Cuba consents the following: Cuba will make no treaties with foreign powers without the consent of the United States.

The United States may intervene by arm or otherwise to preserve peace and to ensure the proper sanitation of the island. The United States will select such naval stations in Cuba as it may desire.

The sale of mines will remain United States property.

The letter of Secretary of War Root is published. It points out that the former resolution, with the explanations attached, so changed the provisions of the Platt amendment that it was not the same as that passed by Congress. It added that President McKinley could not withdraw the troops unless the Platt amendment was incorporated in the constitution. It further stated that the President is not authorized to act until the government is established. When that is done it will be his duty to see whether the constitution contains the Platt amendment as part of itself. In case the convention did not change its former resolution then the President could not remove the troops, as the former resolution altered the Platt amendment. Some of the delegates argued that then, though the amendment was not accepted, a government might be established.

The convention will now appoint a commission to draw up the electoral law. The news of the adoption of the Platt amendment by the Cuban constitutional convention was received with gratification in Washington. Now that the Cubans have demonstrated their good faith in the United States, it is expected that a fairly speedy evacuation of the island will follow, contingent only upon the establishment of a stable government in the island. One cabinet officer, speaking of the matter, expressed the opinion that if the other requirements are met the withdrawal of United States troops might be accomplished during the summer, and that Cuban independence might be a reality by next autumn.

NEWS FROM OUR COLONIES.

"It is no wonder our soldiers in the Philippines think an American apple food for the gods when you look at the thing those Filipinos call an apple," said one of the chiefs of the Department of Agriculture as he held up for inspection an article that looked for all the world like a lemon that had been left on a picnic ground. It was as fine a specimen when put on one of the government transports for shipment to the United States as could be found in a Philippine orchard, but it was of a decidedly perishable nature, and even had it been fully cooled could not have stood the long voyage without serious damage. When it arrived a few worm holes and a small core attached to a bit of skin were all that remained to tell the story. Our soldiers here for apples, real American apples, as a hungry man would for bread, while the most luscious tropical fruits hang all about them.

The repulsive bat they have in the Philippines grows to the size of the American chicken hawk. They are eaten by the natives, though not by those of the better class. The cities, towns and barrios are overrun with the creatures, which are very stupid and easily killed with a pole. Only a small part of the carcass is eaten, all but a portion of each side being thrown away.

Of the 553,243 population of Porto Rico only 75,000 live in cities. On the island but 100 miles long and 36 wide are 40,000 district farms and one-fifth of the island under cultivation. The average size of a farm in Porto Rico is forty-five acres, of which twenty are cultivated. Seventy-one per cent of these Porto Rican farms are owned by whites. Ninety-three per cent of all the farms are cultivated by their owners, a higher rate of owner-cultivation than the United States can show, where the proportion is but 72 per cent. Thirty-eight per cent of the Porto Ricans are colored. In Porto Rico 83 per cent of the colored people are of mixed blood. The percentage of illiteracy in Porto Rico is very high—about 84.

Gov. Allen of Porto Rico speaks plainly in presenting the reason why this island has been at a practical standstill for nearly four centuries, and says that in a climate where a man can lie in a hammock, pick a banana with one hand and dig a sweet potato with one foot, the incentive to industry is fairly small, and that the introduction of fresh blood and Anglo-Saxon push and energy as a means of dispelling the lethargy and developing the riches of the country to their fullest measure.

RESORT HOTEL BURNED.

Mineral Springs House at West Baden Is Destroyed.

The Mineral Springs Hotel at West Baden, Ind., one of the most famous health resorts in the West, was destroyed by fire at an early hour Friday morning, entailing a loss estimated from $400,000 to $500,000. There were 250 guests in the hotel at the time and all lost nearly all their effects. But there was no loss of life and none were fatally injured.

The fire, which was caused, it is believed, by an overheated range, was discovered early and the guests were quickly aroused. The flames, however, spread like a flash and almost in a moment the wooden structure was a mass of flames. The guests and employees were driven in a panic from the place, some in their night gowns and others in pieces of apparel as they could grab in their hasty flight. A number jumped from windows and suffered painful injuries and a few were severely burned. In the mad rush to escape many were trampled under foot and badly bruised.

There were many narrow escapes and thrilling rescues. Numbers of the guests were lowered from windows on ropes improvised from sheets. The hotel was filled with dense black smoke, making escape by the stairways difficult, and in the crush there many women were bruised and trampled. Several guests jumped from the veranda to the ground, but fortunately escaped serious hurt. So quickly did the flames spread to all parts of the building that few of the guests made any attempt to save clothing or valuables.

The hotel contained many invalids, patients who were suffering from rheumatism and unable to move with any speed. The care of this class of guests was given the attention of employees. Willing hands were found, under the direction of the manager, and the crippled and suffering patients were assisted—carried when this was necessary—from their rooms to the lawn.

Gathered about the burning hotel, the flames of which illumined the scene, were the white-robed people, the guests and employees of the big health resort. The guests were taken to the French Lick, a neighboring hotel, where they were cared for.

The Mineral Springs Hotel at West Baden was erected twelve years ago. The owners recently refused $1,000,000 for the hotel, springs and grounds. The hotel was open throughout the year and had accommodations for some 800 guests. Connected with the hotel were an opera house, swimming pool, gymnasium and large tennis alley and an enclosed bicycle track, besides conservatories and bath house buildings.

UTOPIA FOR FARMERS.

G. H. Phillips Tells Them How to Keep Corn at 40 Cents.

Government granaries in Chicago bigger than those that Joseph built in old Egypt, and a farmers' bank with $50,000,000 capital, all in Chicago, are the two agencies which George H. Phillips looks forward to as the means of putting the farmers of the United States in a business paradise, establishing for them a trust which can fight on equal terms with any other trust in the country and making 40 cents the bottom price of corn forever and ever more. Mr. Phillips was given a banquet at the West Hotel in Minneapolis by the National Grain Growers' Association, and in the course of his remarks took his farmer admirers into his confidence and predicted good times for them.

He spoke on the basis of his theory that the 3,000,000 farmers of the land are not "too many headed" to act as a body and that if they do act together they can fix their own prices on commodities as easily as any trust magnates can do it. "Let the government tax the farmer a cent a bushel on his corn crop," he said, "and with the money build elevators in which to store a hundred million of corn and pay 40 cents basis Chicago market for it and the world will pay the same for it. There is not so much of it that we need worry about an extra large crop or two. With the government ready to pay 40 cents for it the farmer can borrow 30 cents from his country bank if he needs money and carry the surplus for seven years, or as long as old Joseph of old Egypt or so ago. Another dream of this sort is one I have had of a farmers' bank located at Chicago. Make the capital $25,000,000 or $50,000,000. Sell the stock in $10 shares, not less than ten shares subscribed to a farmer, who could, if he so desired, dispose of some of his shares to a neighbor."

Without doubt the oldest visitor to the Buffalo Exposition will be Mrs. James Mills, who lives on a farm near the village of Woodham, Perth County, Ont., and who has recently celebrated her 113th birthday.

Mrs. Mills was born in Ireland and is the mother of nine children, the youngest of whom, a sprightly youth of 70 years, has just settled down permanently near his mother over almost half a century spent in sailing over almost all known waters. Mrs. Mills was born in the reign of King George III, and has been a subject of five British sovereigns, George III, George IV, William IV, Victoria, and Edward VII. She has also lived in three centuries.

The oldest bachelor in the world, Noah Raby, has reached the remarkable age of 120 years. He is an inmate of the almshouse at New Brunswick, N. J., where he has lived for thirty-five years. Raby says he was born in Gates County, N. C., on April 1, 1772. Possibly his longevity is accounted for by the Indian blood which he inherited from his full-blooded redskin father, Andrew Bass, Noah bore the name of his mother, Moriah Raby.

FACE DEATH ON SINKING FERRY.

The Station Island Ferry, Northfield, Mass., Land Goes Down.

Within ten minutes of the time the Station Island ferryboat Northfield left her Whitehall street slip in New York she was lying a battered wreck at the bottom of the East river, just off pier 10. During those ten minutes 800 men, women and children on her decks engaged in a battle for life that was viewed with horror by the spectators that lined the shore as the sinking craft slowly drifted up the river with the tide.

The cause of the sinking was a collision with the Central Railroad ferryboat Mauch Chunk. The latter rammed the Northfield just off the Whitehall street slip. It happened almost in the twinkling of an eye. The passengers on the decks of the Northfield were cheering one minute and fighting for life preservers and tramping over one another the next.

How many lives were stamped out in the struggle or how many drowned with the sinking boat may never be accurately known. The police and the crew of the Northfield are firm in the conviction that none were lost. Eye witnesses, however, tell of men and women sinking almost within reach of the piers. Men acted as crabs crawling in the struggle on the deck of the sinking boat. They crowded and pushed their way regardless of the women.

The Mauch Chunk had but a dozen passengers on board. She was bound to New York from Communipaw. Captain Griffin was at the wheel. The damage to the boat was all above decks, and not a person on board was hurt. No effort was made by the Mauch Chunk's captain to follow the boat he had wrecked and save her passengers. Instead, the Mauch Chunk safely landed her passengers and then crawled back to Communipaw, where she was taken up. The Northfield had barely emerged from her slip when the crash came. Both her decks were filled with from 700 to 800. One-half were women.

The boat gave one long whistle as she moved out of the slip. The tide was flooding and the bow swung up the river. Just passing the end of the westernmost track of the slip was the Mauch Chunk. She was bearing to the slip just north of the one from which the Northfield emerged. She was coming with the tide, and this will be Captain Griffin's defense.

The Northfield's whistle shrieked a warning blast. Instantly came the crash. The Mauch Chunk smashed the Northfield's starboard deck works of the Northfield, cutting her overboard almost to the water's edge. The Northfield, disabled, drifted into the stream, and then slowly up the river on the flood tide. The Northfield's pilot steered for the Wall street ferry slip, hoping to land his passengers, but the boat was taking water fast, and before she could reach the slip sank between piers 9 and 10.

SCORE SINK WITH SHIP.

Transport Inaugurates Slips from Dock in Brooklyn and Cape Cod.

Over a score of lives are believed to have been lost and more than fifty men were injured in an accident to the United States transport Inaugurates. The vessel was in the balance dry dock at the Erie basin, South Brooklyn, N. Y., where she was about to undergo extensive repairs. She suddenly slipped from the blocks and capsized. There were about 20 carpenters, machinists and other laborers at work on the vessel and dock at the time. It is supposed that the vessel was thrown from an even keel by ballast improperly placed, or by the shifting of the blocks on which she rested, causing her to list to starboard, driving the shoring beams through the rotten walls of the old floating dry dock in which she was cradled.

Besides the mechanics and other workmen who crowded the vessel and dock, preparing her for a voyage to Manila, there were supposed to have been about thirty Italian laborers in the hold of the ship, employed in shifting the pig iron ballast.

While the workmen were trying to escape the dock itself, overturned by the weight of the ship, turned on its side and sank in fifty feet of water. A number of men were borne down into the water and jammed under the wreckage, which rose to the surface.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

The appointment committee of Columbia University is charged with the work of recommending graduates of the university for teaching or other educational work, and in every way possible assists the competent graduate to obtain such places. No fees are charged for any service rendered by the committee, either to the graduates or to those seeking teachers.

The first step toward compulsory education in Missouri was taken when the Simmons bill passed the House. It provides that the parent or guardian or other person having charge and control of a child between the ages of 8 and 14, shall cause such child to attend regularly some day school, public, private, parochial or nondenominational, not less than three-fourths of the entire time the school is in session, or shall provide such child at home or elsewhere with regular daily instruction during the usual hours, as shall be in the judgment of the court of record having criminal jurisdiction substantially equivalent at least to the instruction given the children of like age at said day school in the locality in which the child resides; provided that every parent, guardian or person in the State having control of a child between the ages of 14 and 16, who is not actually and regularly and lawfully engaged in some useful employment or service, shall cause said child to attend regularly some day school.

The teachers of the Indiana State Normal have received circulars saying that teachers are wanted to go to the Philippines. The circular states that only those who have the best qualifications will be accepted, and only normal or college graduates will be considered. It is said that transportation to the islands will be paid, and that the salaries will range from $600 to $1,200 a year, but that those applicants who are accepted must sign a three years' contract. It is reported that several members of the senior class will make application.

Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION.

Great Development of This Popular Religious Organization.

The jubilee celebration in Boston of the founding of the Young Men's Christian Association centers attention upon the wonderful growth and many sided development of this constantly growing society.

The association had its origin in 1844, in the brains of George Williams, then a dry goods clerk in London. The room where the first meeting was held is still preserved as it was on that day fifty-seven years ago, when twelve young men—the apostolic number—met to launch a movement the extent of which none of them could then predict. The development has been along the line of the paramount of the mustard seed and today in fifty nations, speaking thirty-five different languages, there are 5,132 branches of the Y. M. C. A., with a membership of 521,000. Here in the United States there are 1,430 branches, with a membership of 252,000.

The establishment of the Y. M. C. A. on the American continent was almost simultaneously effected in Montreal and Boston, the year in both cases being 1851. The Boston association waxed rapidly and at the end of eight months had a membership of 1,200. By May, 1855, there were thirty-six associations in the United States and Canada, with a membership of 14,000. In the whole world there were 329 associations, with a membership of 90,000.

The outbreak of the Civil War had a disintegrating influence on the association and in 1862 there were only twenty associations, and these were generally confined to the larger cities. After the war the work of rehabilitating was begun and the growth of Y. M. C. A. work has been constant since.

The railroad department of the Y. M. C. A. had its origin in Cleveland. The railroads have earnestly co-operated in the promotion of the work, contributing liberally for buildings, equipment and secretaries. To-day the railroad associations are a feature on 140,000 miles of road and the railroads are annually contributing $175,000 for maintenance. In 1877 the work on behalf of Indian young men originated.

At the convention in Boston nearly 2,000 delegates were in attendance. A feature of the meeting was an unveiling of a tablet in the Old South Church meeting house, where the association was organized. The first day of the jubilee convention ended with welcoming addresses by prominent citizens, including Mayor Hart, Lieut. Gov. Bates, Henry Ward and the Rev. A. M. Plumb, D. D. C. T. Williams of Montreal and W. E. Dodge of New York responded.

Selection of officers was the first work of the convention. The following were chosen: President, William E. Dodge, New York; Honorary President, Howard Williams, London, England; Vice-Presidents, C. T. Williams, Montreal, Que.; James Stokes, New York; E. H. Thornton, Atlanta, Ga.; S. P. Spencer, St. Louis; C. H. McCormick, Chicago; H. M. Moore, Boston; D. W. S. Pattee, Minneapolis; S. W. Woodward, Washington, D. C.; J. Thoburn Ross, Portland, Ore.; J. C. Cass, Nova Scotia; James E. Hardy, Louisville; Henry W. Waterhouse, Havana; Secretary, C. G. Michener, Chicago; Assistant Secretaries, A. G. Knobel, Nashville, N. C., and Henry W. Stone, Portland, Ore.

Telegrams of congratulation were received from President McKinley and others.

Few-Line Interviews.

Mrs. Kate Mills Boyd of Chicago—By preventing the marriage of criminals, the foundation for the prevention of crime would be laid. Crime is born in people; it is hereditary. Children are born in its midst; they grow up in it, and it is a wonder they come to be what their parents were?

John Hayes of Limerick, Ireland—It's all bark, the talk of revolution in Ireland. I know Mayor Daly has been in this country stirring up agitation, but he is a very warm man. Mrs. Maude Gonne is very beautiful, but, after all, she is more of a theatrical person. We have no politics now in Ireland, save among the working classes.

Carter H. Harrison, Mayor of Chicago—In Chicago, as in every other community, I suppose, there are two classes of clergymen. One class preaches the gospel. That kind of men are content to stick to their profession. The other class seeks advertisement. They are men who like to see their names in the newspapers. They mix in politics or almost anything else that will give them public notice.

John V. Moitt of Kansas City—Representatives of steamship lines are purchasing "oil" for fuel. With the use of oil has been reduced and there is no waste of material, all of the oil making pure fuel. The largest steamships require from 200 to 300 men to keep their furnaces burning when coal is used. With oil as fuel one man, by turning a screw, can do their work. Oil is the coming fuel.

A. D. Carey of Cheyenne, Wyo.—The American frontier, in all that the term implies, is among the things that are vanishing. Geographically, we'll always have a frontier, but for the spirit which has been associated with the frontier ever since the old stage coach days we are none dependent on history poetry and romance. Some of the old timers are reluctant to see the old order of things passing away, but it is passing away, just the same, and all the cowboy stories and ranch verse can't bring the old days back except for an hour or so, just in imagination.

C. R. Kem of Salt Lake City—Eastern business men have come to think much more of Western interests than they did years ago. Eastern commercial centers recognize that the far West is growing, and growing fast, and that there is money to be made out here. So it now frequently happens that Western merchants and buyers are given more ready accommodation than even Eastern men. Western railroad securities—in fact Western securities generally—are sought after.

ILLINOIS DAY IS POSTPONED.

Date of Big Celebration at Buffalo, Pa., Set for September 10.

The date of Illinois day at the Pan-American Exposition has been changed from June 25 to Sept. 10. This action was taken by the committee at the solicitation of the leading clubs, business men and members of the State commission.

The committee received hundreds of complaints after the date of June 25 had been announced, it being asserted that the time given was entirely too short to plan for a successful celebration at Buffalo. The members finally yielded to this pressure and Gov. Yates was communicated with at Springfield by telephone. He said he had no objections to a postponement of the date and that any day after the last of August would be agreeable to him.

Col. E. C. Young was authorized by the chief executive to fix the date and he announced Sept. 10. Those who were planning a Chicago day at the exposition in the fall announced they would combine the time given with Illinois day, so as to make the event a record-breaking affair in regard to attendance. Gov. Yates, escorted by his staff and probably the First regiment, I. N. G., will leave Chicago for Buffalo Sept. 14.

SHOOTS FRIENDS IN ERROR.

Illinois Farmer, Jealous of Wife, Commits a Fatal Mistake.

Peter Gooch, a wealthy farmer of Onago township, shot and dangerously wounded Nathan Cox and wife, his neighbors. The shooting was a clear case of mistaken identity. Gooch and wife have been separated for several months. She was living with his neighbor Chapman. Gooch was insanely jealous about other men paying attention to his wife, and a few days ago told a friend that his wife and Chapman were too intimate and that he would stop their game. Gooch secured a shotgun, hid himself in the shrubbery along the roadside and awaited their coming. Mr. and Mrs. Cox came along and Gooch in his jealous frenzy mistook them for Chapman and his wife and fired. On seeing his awful mistake Gooch fled. He went to a neighbor and gave himself up and is now in jail. Had Mr. and Mrs. Cox died at the time there would have been a lynching.

IS NOT GUILTY OF ARSON.

Wateksa Man Arrested for Setting Fire to House Is Released.

On the night of May 23 Mrs. Herscher, her daughter, Mrs. Maggee, and the latter's 8-year-old son were burned to death in a house located some distance from Wateksa, Burt Maggee, husband of the younger woman, escaped from the burning building with their 8-year-old daughter. Later a party representing himself to be a detective appeared on the scene and he caused the arrest of Maggee. Apparently no evidence can be found against Maggee, who has always borne a good reputation, as the bodies were almost entirely consumed by fire. Peculiar circumstances attending the fire and the strange behavior of the bereaved man excited considerable comment at the time, but after careful examination the coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death and Maggee was set free.

WAYLAYS WOMAN IN WOODS.

A. E. Castleman in Danger of Mob Violence Near McClure, Ill.

Sarah Loeb, aged 39, was brought to the point of death as a result of an assault committed near the station of McClure. Miss Loeb had started for her sister's and when two miles from home in a clump of wood was waylaid and thrown from her horse, her assailant striking her in the back of the head as she fell. The girl was fearfully cut and mangled. She succeeded in reaching a neighbor's house and charged the crime to A. E. Castleman, a young man of the neighborhood. "About midnight Castleman was caught at his mother's home, and, fearing mob violence, was taken to Garbondale. He was later taken to the Alexander County Jail.

Y. M. C. A. MEET CLOSING.

Closing Gathering in History of Organization Comes to an End.

The greatest convention in the history of the Y. M. C. A. closed in Boston Sunday night. Just before the convention adjourned each of the fifteen foreign delegates spoke to the convention in their native tongue on the text which in English means "One is Our Master, Even Christ, and We Are Brethren." It was a dramatic close to what will long be known as a memorable convention.

John B. Moore of New York, international secretary of college work, made an eloquent plea for funds. "There are 200 cities in the world," said he, "with a population of 100,000 or over without a Y. M. C. A., and we should send out not less than 100 secretaries to this field. We should send men to Mexico, the Philippines, to a New regenerated China, to Japan, to India, and to the Levant. It is our aim to raise up in these countries native teachers and men who will then convert their own people. Our great needs are money and men." Papers for pledges to raise $25,000 to send out additional secretaries across the seas were then passed to the convention, and in seven minutes $12,700 was secured in pledges. This was raised to more than $15,000 before the meeting closed, and it is understood that more money will be forthcoming. Several gifts were for $1,000 and many for $100.

In the afternoon one of the largest mass meetings for men ever held in Boston was conducted in Mechanics building. There were at least 5,000 men in attendance. The exercises were in the hands of Fred B. Smith of Chicago, who made an earnest appeal for those in the audience who were not Christians to lead an upright life. As a result of his exhortation about fifty men came forward and signified their desire to lead a better life.

MRS. KENNEDY GUILTY.

Kansas City Woman Given Ten Years in Prison for Murder.

Following the conviction at Kansas City of Mrs. Lulu Prince Kennedy of the murder of her husband, and the imposition in her case of a sentence of ten years in the penitentiary, the State's Attorney announced that he would at once force her father and two brothers to trial on charge of complicity in the killing.

The jury took six ballots. The first stood ten to two for conviction. They stood that way until the last ballot, when all voted for conviction. Mrs. Kennedy remained perfectly calm while the sentence was read. She took her conviction with the stoicism which has been a feature of the trial. She was led back to her old cell without loss of time.

Lulu Prince Kennedy had been Philip Kennedy's wife for five weeks when she called him from his office on Jan. 10 and fired six shots at him with a revolver. Four bullets entered his body. He died on the spot. She was immediately arrested. Her marriage with Kennedy had been forced on the man by her father and two brothers. It took place Dec. 4. Kennedy never lived with his wife, and a week before the shooting fled suit to have the marriage annulled.

MURDERS BY FILIPINOS.

Shocking Crimes Are Committed by Organized Bands.

A Philippine mail brings to the War Department the records in eleven cases wherein Filipinos were tried by military commissions on charges including murder, kidnapping, assault and battery, burglary and violation of the rules of war.

An especially notable case arose out of the operations of a famous oath-bound band of Filipinos called the society of the "Sandatahans." The principal officers of this society, next to a triumvirate of chiefs, are a chief executioner and assistants, and a requisite number of grave diggers who participate in the self-appointed work of the band. The leaders select their victim, capture and carry him away in the night to a secret rendezvous on a sandy beach covered with very tall grass, where the diggers already have prepared a grave. Here, in the presence of the assembled band, helpless men and women from time to time have been strangled to death and tossed into the graves. The members of the band then disperse, and trust to the rise and fall of the nearby waters to hide the evidence of their ghastly work. Ten members of the band, including two of the chiefs, were tried before a military commission, and eight of them were sentenced to be hanged.

BOERS GIVE HARD BLOWS.

Victorian Rifles Surprised in Camp and Nearly Annihilated.

Lord Kitchener has cabled from Pretoria as follows: "Near Welmarus, twenty miles south of Middleburg, 250 Victorian mounted rifles were surprised in camp at Steenkoppies by a superior force of Boers at 7:30 p. m. Jan. 12. The enemy crept up to within short range and poured a deadly fire into the camp, killing two officers and sixteen men and wounding four officers and thirty-eight men, of whom twenty-eight were slightly wounded. Only two officers and fifty men escaped to Gen. Beaton's camp. The remainder were taken prisoners and released. Two pompoms were captured by the enemy. Full details have not yet been received."

The serious reverse which Lord Kitchener reports is the first accident of this kind that has happened to the British Italian contingent, and it is supposed to be due to neglect of proper picketing. Although it is offset by the defeat inflicted upon De Wet, the loss of the guns is regarded as a serious matter which will encourage the Boers to continue the struggle.

ANTIOCH, ILLINOIS.

Indigestion must have been responsible for the report sent to his home government by the German consul at Cincinnati, saying: "the time is past when immigrants to the U. S. had a chance to acquire riches." There is hardly a community of any size in which a living contradiction to the consul's assertion cannot be pointed out.

Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau, declares the practice of firing cannon at clouds to protect vineyards from hail and frost, which is spreading in the grape-growing sections of Europe, to be a foolish notion, about on par with the rain-making experiments in that country a few years ago.

No higher praise of the ability of the American woman is possible than the offer of a big London firm to pay the official expenses of delegates from any British trades union willing to come to the U. S. to study our method.

In suggesting the submission of the Chinese indemnity muddle to The Hague tribunal for settlement this government made another common sense move, whether the powers have the wisdom to accept it or not.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says Druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following la grippe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by W. H. Emmons, Antioch, and Thomson's Pharmacy, Grayslake.

Talker Birds at India.

Most curious are the sewing, or tailor birds of India—little yellow things not much larger than one's thumb. To escape falling a prey to snakes and monkeys, the tailor bird picks up a dead leaf and flies up into a high tree, and with a fibre for a thread and its bill for a needle sews the leaf on to a green one, hanging from the tree; the sides are sewed up, an opening being left at the top. That a nest is swinging in the tree no snake or monkey or even a man would suspect.

CHAPTER V.

"Martin Dobree!" ejaculated both in one breath.

"Yes, mademoiselle," I said, uncaring the tress of hair as it had been a serpent, and going forward to greet them; "are you surprised to see me?"

"Surprised!" echoed the elder. "No; we are amazed—puzzled. However did you get here? When did you come?"

"Quite easily," I replied. "I came on Sunday, and Tardif, fetched me in his own boat. If the weather had permitted I should have paid you a call; but you know what it has been."

"To be sure," answered Emma; "and how is dear Julia?" She will be very anxious about you."

"She was on the verge of a nervous attack when I left her," I said; "that will tend to increase her anxiety."

"Poor, dear girl!" she replied sympathetically. "But Martin is this young woman here so very ill? We have heard from the Renoufs she had had a dangerous fall. To think of your being in Sark ever since Sunday, and we never heard a word of it!"

"Is that the young woman's hair?"

"Yes," I replied; "it was necessary to cut it off. She is dangerously ill with fever."

Both of them shrank a little towards the door. A sudden temptation assailed me, and took me so much by surprise that I had yielded before I knew I was attacked. It was their shrinking movement that did it. My answer was almost as automatic and involuntary as their retreat.

"You see it would not be wise for any of us to go about," I said. "A fever breaking out in the island, especially now you have no resident doctor, would be very serious."

Thus I secured isolation for myself and my patient. But why had I been eager to do so? I could not answer that question to myself, and I did not ponder over it many minutes. I was impatient, yet strangely reluctant, to look at the sick girl again, after the loss of her beautiful hair. The change in her appearance struck me as singular. Her face before had a look of suffering and trouble, making it almost old, charming as it was; now she had the aspect of quite a young girl, scarcely touching upon womanhood.

We sat up again together that night, Tardif and I. He would not smoke, lest the scent of the tobacco should get in through the crevices of the door, and lessen the girl's chance of sleep; but he held his pipe between his teeth, taking an imaginary puff now and then, that he might keep himself wide awake. We talked to one another in whispers.

"Tell me all you know about mam'zelle," I said. He had been chary of his knowledge before, but his heart seemed open at this moment. Most hearts are more open at midnight than at any other hour.

"There's not much to tell, doctor," he answered. "Her name is Olivier, as I said to you; but she does not think she is any kin to the Oliviers of Guernsey. She is poor, though she does not look as if she had been born poor, does she?"

"Not in the least degree," I said. "If she is not a lady by birth, she is one of the first specimens of Nature's gentleness I have ever come across. Has she written to any one since she came here?"

"Not to a soul," he answered eagerly. "She told me she had no friends nearer than Australia. That is a great way off."

"And she has had no letters?" I asked.

"Not one," he replied. "She has neither written nor received a single letter."

"But how did you come across her?" I inquired. "She did not fall from the skies, I suppose. How was it she came to live in this out-of-the-world place with you?"

"I'll tell you all about it, Doctor Martin," he said, and he related how he had met the young lady in London.

"Tardif," I said, when he had concluded the recital, "I did not know what a good fellow you were, though I ought to have learned it by this time."

"No," he answered, "it is not in me; it's something in her. You feel something of it yourself, doctor, or how could you stay in a poor little house like this, thinking of nothing but her, and not caring about the weather keeping you away from home? There was a curious thing—she had not any luggage with her, not a box nor a bag of any kind. She never fancied that I knew, for that would have troubled her. It is my belief that she has run away."

"But who can she have run away from, Tardif?" I asked.

"Heaven knows," he answered, "but the girl has suffered; you can see that by her face. Whoever or whatever she has run away from, her cheeks are white from it, and her heart sorrowful. I know nothing of her secret; but this I do know: she is as good, and true, and sweet a little soul as my poor little wife was. If she should die, it will be a great grief of heart to me. If I could offer my life to God in place of hers, I'd give it willingly."

"No, she will not die. Look there, Tardif!" I said, pointing to the door sill of the inner room. A white card had been slipped under the door noiselessly—a signal agreed upon between mother Renouf and me, to inform me that my patient had at last fallen into a profound slumber, which seemed likely to continue some hours.

The morning was more than half gone before mother Renouf opened the door and came out to us, her old face looking more haggard than ever, but her little eyes twinkling with satisfaction.

"All goes well," she said. "Your little mam'zelle does not think of dying yet."

I did not stay to watch how Tardif received this news, for I was impatient myself to see how she was going on. Thank heaven, the fever was gone, the delirium at an end. The dark gray eyes opening languidly, as my fingers touched her wrist, were calm and intelligent. She was as weak as a kitten, but that did not trouble me much. I was sure her natural health was good, and she would soon recover her lost strength. I had to stoop down to hear what she was saying.

"Have I kept quite still, doctor?" she asked faintly.

I must own that my eyes smarted, and my voice was not to be trusted. I had never felt so overjoyed in my life as at that moment. But what a singular wish to be obedient possessed this girl! What a wonderful power of submissive self-control!

"I should like to see Tardif," murmured the girl to me that night, after she had awakened from a second long and peaceful sleep.

I called him and he came in barefoot, his broad, burly frame seeming to fill up all the little room. She could not raise her head, but her face was turned towards us, and she held out her small wasted hand to him, smiling faintly. He fell on his knees before he took it into his great, horny palm, and looked down upon it as he held it very carefully with tears standing in his eyes.

"Why, it is like an egg shell," he said.

"God bless you, mam'zelle, God bless you for getting well again!"

She laughed at his words—a feeble though merry laugh, like a child's—and she seemed delighted with the sight of his hearty face, glowing as it was with happiness. It was a strange chance that had thrown these two together. I could not allow Tardif to remain long; but after that she kept devising little messages to send him through me whenever I was about to leave her. Her intercourse with mother Renouf was extremely limited, as the old woman's knowledge of English was slight. It happened, in consequence, that I was the only person who could talk or listen to her through the long and dreary hours.

CHAPTER VI.

My mother was lying on the sofa in the breakfast room, with the Venetian blinds down to darken the morning sunshine. Her eyes were closed, though she held in her hands the prayer book, from which she had been reading as usual the Psalms for the day. Whilst I was looking at her, though I made no sort of sound or movement, she seemed to feel that I was there; and after looking up she started from her sofa, and flung her arms about me, pressing closer and closer.

"Oh, Martin, my boy; my darling!" she sobbed, "thank heaven you are come back safe! Oh, I have been very rebellious, very unbelieving. I ought to have known that you would be safe. Oh, I am thankful!"

"So am I, mother," I said, kissing her. "You have come back like a barbarian," she said, "rougher than Tardif himself. How have you managed, my boy? You must tell me all about it."

"As soon as I have had my breakfast, mother, I must put up a few things in a hamper to go back by the Sark cutter," I answered.

"What sort of things?" she asked. "Tell me, and I will be getting them ready for you."

"Well, there will be some medicines, of course," I said; "you cannot help me in that. But you can find things suitable for a delicate appetite; jelly, you know, and jams, and marmalade; anything nice that comes to hand. And a few amusing books."

"Books!" echoed my mother. "I recollect at once that the books she might select, as being suited to a Sark peasant, would hardly prove interesting to my patient. I could not do better than go down to Barbet's circulating library and look out some good works there."

"Well, no," I said, "never mind the books. If you will look out the other things, those can wait."

"Who are they for?" asked my mother. "For my patient," I replied.

"What sort of a patient, Martin?" she inquired again.

"Her name is Olivier," I said. "A common name. Our postman's name is Olivier."

"Oh, yes," she answered; "I know several families of Oliviers. I dare say I should know this person if you could tell me her Christian name. Is it Jane, or Martha, or Rachel?"

"I don't know," I said; "I did not ask."

"The packing of that hamper interested me wonderfully; and my mother, rather amazed at my taking the superintendence of it in person, stood by me in her store closet, letting me help myself liberally. There was a good space left after I had taken sufficient to supply Miss Olivier with good things for some weeks to come. If my mother had not been by I should have filled it up with books."

"Give me a loaf or two of white bread," I said; "the bread at Tardif's is coarse and hard, as I know after eating it for a week."

"Whatever you are doing here, Martin," exclaimed Julia's unwelcome voice behind me.

"He has been living on Tardif's coarse fare for a week," answered my mother; "so now he has compassion enough for his Sark patient to pick up some dainties for her. If you could only give him one or two of your bad headaches he would have more sympathy for you!"

"Have you had one of your headaches, Julia?" I inquired.

"The worst I ever had," she answered. "It was partly your going off at that rash way, and the storm that came on after, and the fright we were in. You must not think of going again, Martin. I shall take care you don't go after we are married."

Julia had been used to speak out as calmly about our marriage as if it was no more than going to a picnic. It galled upon me just then, though it had been much the same with myself. There was no delightful agitation about the future that lay before us. We were going to set up housekeeping by ourselves, and that was all. There was no mystery in it; no problem to be solved; no discovery to be made on either side. There would be no Blue Beard's chamber in our dwelling. We had grown up together; now we had agreed to grow old together. That was the sum total of marriage to Julia and me.

I finished packing the hamper, and sent Pellet with it to the Sark office, having addressed it to Tardif, who had engaged to be down at the Creux Harbor to receive it when the cutter returned. I was in haste to secure a parcel of books before the cutter should start home again, with its courageous little knot of market people. I ran down to Barbet's. I looked through the library shelves until I hit upon two novels. Besides these, I chose a week for Sunday reading.

Barbet brought half a sheet of an old Times to form the first cover of my parcel. The shop was crowded with market people, and as he was busy I undertook to pack them myself. I was about to fold the newspaper round them, when my eye was caught by an advertisement at the top of one of the columns. "Strayed from her home in London, on the 20th inst., a young lady with bright brown hair, grey eyes, and delicate features; twenty-one. She is believed to have been alone. Was dressed in a blue silk dress, and sealskin jacket and hat. Fifty pounds reward is offered to any person giving such information as will lead to her restoration to her friends. Apply to Messrs. Scott and Brown, Gray's Inn Road, E. O."

I stood perfectly still for some seconds, staring blankly at the very slight advertisement under my eyes. There was not the slightest doubt in my mind that it had a direct reference to my pretty patient in Sark. But I had no time for deliberation then, and I tore off a large corner of the Times containing that and other advertisements, and thrust it unseen into my pocket.

In the afternoon I went down with Julia and my mother to the new house, to see after the unpacking of furniture. I can imagine circumstances in which nothing could be more delightful than the care with which a man prepares a home for his future wife. The very fact of the walls, and the way the light falls in through the windows, would become matters of grave importance, but there was not the slightest flavor of this sentiment in our furnishing of the new house. It was really more Julia's business than mine. I went about the place as if in some dream. The house commanded a splendid view of the whole group of the Channel Islands, and the rocky islets innumerable strewn about the sea. The afternoon sun was shining full upon Sark, and whenever I looked through the window I could see the cliffs of the Harro Gosselin, purple in the distance, with a silver thread of foam at their foot. No wonder that my thoughts wandered, and the words my mother and Julia were speaking went in at one ear and out at the other. Certainly I was dreaming; but which part was the dream?

"I don't believe he cares a straw about the carpets!" exclaimed Julia, in a disappointed tone.

"I do indeed, dear Julia," I said.

She had set her mind upon having flowers in her drawing room carpet, and the day before, she had sent for a large, brightly-colored blossom, very gay and, as I ventured to remark to myself, very gaudy.

"You like it better than you did in the pattern?" she asked anxiously.

"I did not like it one whit better, but I should have been a brute if I had said so. She was gazing at it and me with so troubled an expression, that I felt it necessary to set her mind at ease."

"It is certainly handsomer than the pattern," I said, regarding it attentively; "very much handsomer."

"Julia, my love," said my mother, "remember that we wish to show Martin those patterns whilst it is daylight. Tomorrow is Sunday, you know."

A little tinge of color crept over Julia's tintless face. We then drew near to the window, from which we could see Sark so clearly, and Julia, drew out of her pocket a very large envelope, which was bursting with its contents.

They were small scraps of white silk and white satin. I took them mechanically into my hand, and could not help admiring their pure, lustrous, glossy beauty. I passed my fingers over them softly. There was something in the sight of their soft, moved me, as if they were fragments of the shining garments of some vision, which in times gone by, when I was much younger, had now and then floated before my fancy. I did not know any one lovely enough to wear raiment of gleaming white like these, unless—unless—A passing glimpse of the pure white face, and glossy hair, and deep grey eyes of my Sark patient flashed across me.

"They are patterns for Julia's wedding dress," said my mother, in a low, tender tone.

ABOUT CIGAR BOXES.

Spanish Cedar Is the Best Wood, but Comes from Cuba.

"There are something like 14,000,000 cigar boxes used in the United States annually, and about nine-tenths of that number are made in this city, where the trade rivals the clothing industry in point of capital invested, and the number of people employed," said a leading cigar-box manufacturer in New York to the writer. "The material out of which the best boxes are made comes principally from Cuba, and is known as Spanish cedar. The recent war with Spain shortened the supply and increased the price of the article to such an extent that many box makers have been compelled to use a cheaper and less desirable grade of wood for the purpose."

"One New York firm has been experimenting with timber from the unexplored Paraguayan forests, which are said to contain the finest cedar wood in the world. They have, however, experienced considerable difficulty in selling their boxes, as cigar manufacturers and connoisseurs insist that it spoils a fine cigar to put it in any box not made of genuine Spanish cedar. The latter wood always retains the flavor of a good cigar. Indeed, some people claim that it improves the flavor. The reason given is that it grows in the same localities as the best Havana tobacco."

Attempts made to use cedar grown in the United States for cigar boxes have not been very successful. The Florida and South American cedar contains a peculiar gum that melts when the wood is exposed to the heat of a store or house, and thus the labels and sometimes the cigars in a box are spoiled. Of course, the smokers of cheaper brands of cigars are less particular about the quality of the wood used for their boxes, and a veneered cedar, made from a peculiar sort of cedar that grows in Mexico, is often substituted for the Spanish article. But it cannot be done without the cigar dealers finding it out, and the consequence is that even a good cigar when packed in such a box sells at a disadvantage.—Washington Star.

A DOUBTFUL STORY.

Too Good to Be True, Though a Sober Man Tells It.

"Never had such a shock in my life. I questioned for a few minutes whether I was in my right mind. I was sick, and good and sick at that. I called up central, and was informed in one of the most pleasant voices I ever heard that they were busy on the line of my regular physician. Just as I was going to cut loose on a string of profanity she said: 'You're sick, sir. I can tell from your voice. I'll call physicians till I get one. Meantime you'd better lie down.'"

"Say, nothing but a dead faint would have removed me from that telephone. I listened as I heard her ring for one doctor after another, always quick and pointed in her inquiries, but patient and not a lost note in that flute-like voice. I forgot that I was sick, and I was sorry when she finally found a physician whom she told to hurry to me."

"A little later she called up to know if I needed a nurse. Of course I did, just because I wanted the pleasure of hanging on to that receiver while she routed up one number after another until the desired article was procured. It was great. When it came to getting drugs she was only one removed from a magician. I ordered dainties that I never eat, just to hear her call for them, for I pretended a degree of weakness that would not permit of my standing too long at the phone. The whole thing was a startling revelation to me. When I'm well the company is going to lose that girl or she'll refuse what a good many mammals regard as a catch."

Then one of the most desirable eligibles in the town went to the telephone and asked the time, though he had three clocks and a chronometer, all on duty.—Detroit Free Press.

A Queer Inscription.

A queer sentence closes the inscription on a tombstone in a churchyard in Leigh, England. After announcing the name and other particulars of the lady there buried, these words follow: "A virtuous woman is to her husband." The explanation is that space prevented "a crown" being cut in full, and the stonecutter argued that a crown equals 5s.

A Fellow-Feeling.

Perambulating Pete-Boar, I ain't an ordinary tramp. But every spring, 'bout April, my wife insists upon cleaning' her.

A Conservative Claim.

"I suppose you think you have the greatest climate in the country," said the tourist.

"No," said the man who was suffering from a cold. "We don't claim the greatest in that line. But we do claim the largest variety."—Washington Star.

Cheap Enough.

"Isn't it ridiculous to say 'Talk is cheap'?"

"Oh, I don't know. I could take you to a place where you'd get dead loads of it and a shave thrown in for 10 cents."—Philadelphia Press.

NEW STAMP TAX LAW.

Important Changes and Modifications Taking Effect on the First of July.

The stamp tax, to which business has been subjected for more than two years, will be greatly modified by the new revenue law. After July 1 no stamps will be required on telegraph or telephone messages, bank checks, bonds, certificates of deposit, drafts, express receipts, life insurance policies, leases, mortgages, power of attorney, promissory notes, money orders, protests, warehouse receipts. These are the articles the tax upon which has been directly borne by the public.

Many modifications have been made in the revenue bill which affect the manufacturers. The tax on beer, cigars, tobacco and cigarettes has been reduced. The tax on theaters, billiard tables, public exhibitions, has been retained, but reduced.

It is estimated that the government receipts will be reduced from $40,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually by the revision of the revenue act.

Bank checks with 2-cent stamps imprinted thereon are being received in large numbers for redemption at the internal revenue bureau. On and after July 1 no stamps will be necessary, and the banks, which are loaded with stamped checks, are endeavoring to get rid of the surplus stock. It looks as if there would be a deluge of stamped checks pouring in upon the revenue bureau, just as there was in 1883, when rooms and corridors were filled with the accumulations, which came every day by express and mail.

It is yet undecided whether the owner of stamped checks will receive them again after he has turned them in for redemption. In 1883 the stamped checks were punched for cancellation and then given back to their original owners, so that they could be used.

At the present time there seems to be a misunderstanding between the auditor of the treasury and the commissioner of the internal revenue as to the course to be pursued, the latter believing that the auditor has decided that when a stamped check has been submitted as a voucher for claim it cannot be returned. This does not coincide with the informal statement made by the auditor, and it will probably require an official order from the Secretary of the Treasury to finally settle the matter.

The demand for the return of the stamped checks is very emphatic, many business associations having taken the matter up in earnest, and insisting that if the stamped checks are completely destroyed commercial houses will suffer great loss.

The internal revenue bureau is already preparing for the changes which are to occur in the stamp law. The general public is most deeply interested in bank check stamps and stamps on telegraph and telephone messages. These are all repealed. All together, stamps are to be abolished on twenty-six articles, and it is estimated that the internal revenue bureau that the revenues will suffer a reduction aggregating from $40,000,000 to $45,000,000.

The latest circular issued by the bureau for the guidance of persons interested in the redemption of stamps states that the latter will be redeemed when presented in quantities of $2 or more face value, and "no claim for redemption will be allowed unless presented within two years after the purchase of the stamps from the government. Claims for the redemption of stamps must be prepared in the district where the claimant resides and forwarded by the collector of that district to the internal revenue bureau. The commissioner states that under the law and regulations all stamped instruments and all imprinted checks, drafts and so forth, presented for the redemption of the stamps thereon must, when the stamps are redeemed, be retained with the claim; therefore, no such instruments can be returned to the owners thereof."

But there seems to be a misunderstanding about the matter and it is possible that the checks will be returned.

Next to the bankers, the makers of patent medicines are most widely interested in the repeal of the stamp laws, the tax now being only 1/4 of a cent for every 5 cents' worth of value. It is said that the internal revenue bureau that by far the largest proportion of stamped medicines have separate stamps affixed, only about fifty firms having taken advantage of the opportunity provided by the law to have special stamps prepared for their individual use. It has already been decided by the treasury official that if a stamp has been affixed to the proprietary package, it cannot be redeemed. The work of the bureau will therefore be confined to the redemption of such imprinted labels and separate stamps, have not been placed upon the package, but even this will entail a very large amount of extra work.

The remaining items upon which the use of stamps has been abolished will not give the internal revenue bureau much trouble, as in nearly every case the stamps have been attached separately and not imprinted. This is true of certificates of deposit, leases, manifests, mortgages, promissory notes, money orders, warehouse receipts, etc.

ILLINOIS BREAKS RECORD.

The New Battleship on Trial Averages 17.51 Knots an Hour.

The trial of the battleship Illinois took place over the Cape Ann course Wednesday, and the new war vessel showed a sustained speed of 17.51 nautical miles an hour. This breaks all previous records, and proves that the Illinois is the fastest vessel of its class in the American navy. The average speed is better than was done by either of the other two ships in the same class, the Alabama and the Wisconsin, the latter built and given a trial on the Pacific coast steaming 17.12 knots.

High Birth Rates in New England.

The birth rate in Fall River, according to the census of 1900, is higher than that of any other city of over 80,000 population in the country, being 88.75 per 1,000. Holyoke comes next with 88.50. There is then a drop to 81.05 in New Bedford, 80.80 in Waterbury, Conn., and 20.20 in Cambridge. These are the five highest birth rates.

A CRY FOR HELP.

Result of a Prompt Reply.—Two Letters from Mrs. Watson, Published by Special Permission.—For Women's Eyes Only.

To MRS. PINKHAM, LYNN, MASS.

"DEAR MADAM:—I am suffering from inflammation of the ovaries and womb, and have been for eighteen months. I have a continual pain and soreness in my back and side. I am only free from pain when lying down, sitting in an easy chair. When I stand I suffer with severe pain in my side and back. I believe my troubles were caused by over work and lifting some years ago.

"Life is a drag to me, and I sometimes feel like giving up ever being a well woman; have become careless and unconcerned about everything. I am in bed now. I have had several doctors, but they did me but little good.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been recommended to me by a friend, and I have made up my mind to give it a fair trial.

"I write this letter with the hope of hearing from you in regard to my case."—Mrs. S. J. Watson, Hampton, Va.

November 27, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to acknowledge to you the benefit that your advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"I had been suffering with female troubles for some time, could walk but a short distance, had terrible bearing down pains in lower part of my bowels, backache, and pain in ovary. I used your medicine for four months and was so much better that I could walk three times the distance that I could before.

"I am to-day in better health than I have been for more than two years, and I know it is all due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I recommend your advice and medicine to all women who suffer."—Mrs. S. J. Watson, Hampton, Va.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. Not Set with Folds.

Not set with folds is a stylish method of trimming handsome silk or crepe gowns. One of these has the lower edge of the skirt finished with net, which forms the lower edge of it. This is set at intervals with narrow bias folds of the silk and is finished at the top with an incrustation in the silk of a thin lace, which is used in other parts of the gown. The yoke of the gown is also of the net, set around with folds stitched at the top only, in the same way. Frills of the net with folds finish the lower edge of the silk sleeve above the under sleeve, just below the elbow.

Dyspeptics cannot be long lived because to live requires nourishment. Food is not nourishing until it is digested. A disordered stomach cannot digest food, it must have assistance. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests all kinds of food without aid from stomach, allowing it to rest and regain its natural functions. Its elements are exactly the same as the natural digestive fluids and it simply can help but do you good. W. T. Hill.

Men Who Have Many Patents.

Thirty-eight inventors have taken out a hundred or more each of United States patents since the beginning of the year 1872. Mr. Edison leads all, with 742 patents; Professor Elihu Thomson is credited with 444 and Mr. Westinghouse and Sir Hiram S. Maxim both occupy high places on this roll of honor.

Helped to Remove Napoleon's Remains.

Ernest August Renner of Cincinnati is one of the few survivors of the 12 men appointed to carry the coffin of Napoleon I at the time of its removal from St. Helena to its present resting place in Paris, and he is the only one of the 12 not a native of France, his birthplace being Hanover.
